

'Tis the season for data breaches.

A festive DLP guide for Santa Claus, from Next.

Compliance

The team in the North Pole has access to a lot of personally identifiable information (PII). We advise implementing robust controls to protect this data so it doesn't leave your grotto.

Visibility

An understanding of what data is in your operation is essential. To stay compliant, you'll need visibility into how your users (elves) are using, accessing, modifying, and sharing that data.

Intellectual Property Protection

Protecting your festive secrets is top priority. Such as how all the toys are made, and the path travelled around the world. It would be damaging if these secrets got out, and dangerous for your safety en route.

Insider Threat

You need to know if elves are leaking information, either maliciously (evil elf) or inadvertently (elf who needs training). Incident-based training is the most effective method for user awareness.
